Social Media Best Practice and Tips
1. Think mobile first.
As more and more people interact with social media on their mobile devices, make sure that you bear that in mind when creating or selecting content.

- Think ‘thumb-stopping’ designs. How do you stop the scroll?
- Vertical or square videos and images (Facebook & Instagram): Most people hold their phones vertically, so you'll cover more of their screen. Vertical video doesn’t work so well in Twitter feeds though.
- Shorten text: People scan feeds quickly. Where possible, keep your copy short, clear and to the point.
- Avoid small text on images. If you have to zoom into the image to read the text on a phone, it's too small!
- Subtitle videos where possible. Many people watch without sound.

2. Grab attention quickly
Social media feeds are busy and fast moving for most users (we scroll more content on Facebook each week than the height of Big Ben!). Opportunity to grab interest is extremely short.

Showcase your brand within the first three seconds.

3. Use visuals
Facebook’s algorithm favours video (live video even more than anything else) but all platforms advise using eye-catching video or photos in your posts.

4. Design for an objective.
Whether repurposing existing assets or creating new ones, make sure that each part of your creative works together to help you achieve your overall business goal and includes your branding.

It all begins with video

75% of all mobile data traffic will be video by 2020.
People spend 5x longer looking at video than static content across Facebook and Instagram.
Twitter specific tips

1. Stick to one message
Keep your copy concise and focus on one key message per post. You can include a link to your website or blog post if there is more to convey.

2. Ask questions or run polls
Asking questions is a great way to interact with your followers (respond to their answers too). Polls also work well and are easy for followers to engage with.

3. Keep an eye on relevant hashtags
Not everyone will tag you in relevant posts, check hashtags relevant to your brand and the campaign and engage with the community where appropriate. Engaging around topical content is especially useful.

4. Use Twitter Cards
If you have access to Twitter Ads, when linking to your website, it is better to create a website card rather than posting an image with a link in the copy. This makes the entire image clickable and has a higher click-through rate than links in the body of the message.
Facebook specific tips

1. Spark conversation

Facebook’s algorithm prioritises posts from a user’s friends and family and updates that spark conversation over and above organic posts from publishers or businesses. Most organic posts will only reach around 3% of followers unless they are particularly engaging.

   • Note: Using “engagement-bait” to get people into comment or 'like' posts will lead Facebook to demote these posts in News Feed.

2. Crossposting

When working with partners, crossposting video content on Facebook is extremely useful for keeping track of overall viewing figures and reach more people organically than ‘sharing’ the original post.

3. Avoid links in copy

When linking to other sites from your Facebook post. Wherever possible, remove the url from the post once the preview image is generated, so you have a cleaner post.
Instagram specific tips

1. Avoid links in copy
Links included in captions are not clickable, so best avoided.

2. Use hashtags (but not too many!)

3. Set up a free business profile
When you have a business account, you can add info such as an address or email address. You can also access performance and audience insights for your account.

Within the app, find Settings, then scroll down to Switch to business account.
Instagram Stories tips

1. Aim for 10 seconds
The top-performing stories are under 10 seconds long rather than the 15 allowed. Highlight your brand within the first three of these seconds.

2. Sound
60% of Instagram Stories worldwide are viewed with sound on.

3. Keep stories fun
People use stories in fun, spontaneous ways as opposed to the more curated feed.
- Play with built-in elements such as stickers, emojis, Boomerang and Hyperlapse.
- Consider if there are ways to gamify your Story (questions, polls, tap to reveal...’)

4. Crossposting
You can also crosspost your own Instagram Stories with your page’s Facebook stories to reach a wider audience.

Cheat sheet – ensure your video is suitable for your chosen platform

Remember:
• Most people hold their phones vertically
• With the exception of Instagram Stories, design for sound off
Facebook & Instagram ads

1. Avoid text on images for Facebook or Instagram ads
If you can, use the text/headline/link description fields instead. If you must use text on your image, try a smaller font and fewer words to lower the proportion of text to image. Learn more about text on images.

2. Add movement
Ads with movement stand out in News Feed, so consider videos, gifs or cinemagraphs.
