Chief executive’s welcome

Tackling inequality is at the heart of our ten-year strategy, Uniting the Movement.

Our equality, diversity and inclusion work is intrinsically linked to this strategy – and the role leadership will play in delivering our ambition is, therefore, critical.

Through our words and actions, we’re creating the climate, and becoming both sponsors and role models, for the future we want to build.

This Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan clearly sets out our ambitions as an organisation.

They represent our internal objectives for ensuring equality, diversity and inclusion for the next four years, and recognise the principles around these as set out in the Code for Sports Governance.

Our plan aims to be ambitious, in both changing behaviour and making progress.

The plan describes what this means in practice: creating a climate for change, and setting ourselves targets to be more representative of British society today. We’ll achieve this by being more self-aware and crucially by attracting, progressing, and retaining diverse talent.

It’s hugely important to me that all employees are treated fairly and with respect and that they can flourish and reach their full potential. This means ensuring we deliver on a wide range of workplace outcomes for staff, around recruitment, progression, and our decision-making processes in relation to roles and structure.

Inequality cannot be tackled by one-off disconnected initiatives – our action plan is therefore intended to look across our actions and translate them into tangible impact and results.

We’ll monitor and report on progress annually and remain focused on achieving our goals.

Notwithstanding our equality, diversity and inclusion journey to date, I hope that we’ve set out an agenda for real change in this plan. It’s a catalyst for change that needs to be understood at every level across the organisation.

These are our equality priorities and everyone in the organisation will play a critical role in achieving them. There’s real power in us all working together to make progress: ensuring we create lasting change so that everyone feels valued and can thrive in our organisation.

Tim Hollingsworth
Chief executive
Board champion statement

As we all recover from the pandemic, there are new and ongoing challenges which continue to exacerbate social inequalities. Barriers to participation in sport and physical activity persist. Tackling these inequalities requires a competent, compassionate, and representative workforce.

At Sport England, a more diverse Board continues to focus on enabling long-term, systemic change that will create further opportunities for more people. Changes in organisational practice and culture are critical to achieving a diverse, inclusive workforce at every level.

There has been steady progress in implementing the Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan. These actions are critical in ensuring that the organisation is in the best position to advance the ambitions of its strategy ‘Uniting the Movement’, which places tackling inequalities at its core.

But the pursuit of parity internally and externally in sport and physical activity must be constant and relentless. It must be driven at an organisational level and valued individually.

This updated plan draws on broad consultation. In particular, our employee and equality networks have regularly engaged in valuable discussion.

The issues we face remain complex. Our approach will need to constantly evolve. Maintaining the checks and challenges of our approach within and outside the organisation is essential to achieving positive and sustainable change.

The challenges we face in sport and physical activity are deeply connected to wider inequalities that we cannot ignore. But we know that sport and physical activity play a powerful role in connecting communities and improving quality of life.

This isn’t just about fairness: there’s an economic imperative to being relevant to and representative of the communities we serve.

Rashmi Becker
Board champion for equality, diversity, and inclusion

Sport and physical activity must be open and accessible to all as it has a fundamental role to play in the nation’s physical and mental health.

As well as being Sport England’s Board Champion for equality, diversity and inclusion, I’m also a South Asian woman and guardian to my older, disabled brother.

The review and update of the Sport England Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan reflects a commitment to learning, improving, and remaining relevant.
Section 3

Introduction

We’re committed to creating sustainable, lasting change in our approach to equality, diversity and inclusion, and our internal Diversity and Inclusion Action plan is our roadmap to making this a reality.
Our plan aims to:

• Be ambitious in changing our behaviours and ensuring we make progress in advancing equality within our organisation

• Be inclusive in our daily interactions and decisions, and act as the catalyst to create opportunities that support our employees’ career development and progression

• Be measurable and regularly reviewed by our internal Equality, Diversity and Inclusion group, and our Board and Executive members.

3.1 Purpose

Our long-term strategy, Uniting the Movement, has a vision to imagine a nation of more equal, inclusive, and connected communities – a country where people live happier, healthier and more fulfilled lives. This vision translates into how we want our own employees to feel about their employment and will form the basis of our wider People Commitment which will place our values and equality, diversity and inclusion at its heart.

Our goal is to create an inclusive culture where everyone accepts and views as a strength the difference we all bring to our organisation. We want all our employees to thrive, as they're our greatest resource and key to the successful implementation of our strategy.

We’re setting ourselves ambitious targets around equality, diversity and inclusion as creating a diverse and inclusive workplace is an ongoing journey. We know that our workforce isn’t as diverse as we would like it to be, and we recognise that wider societal issues will impact upon us as an employer.

Our Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan is our roadmap to delivering these ambitions. It takes an internal perspective of our organisation whilst maintaining a critical awareness of our role in modelling inclusive behaviours across the sports and physical activity sector.

Although we’ve made progress in representation this isn’t enough. We’ve announced our ambition to attract new people, progress and retain existing talent from Black, Asian and minority ethnic groups, and we’re agreeing specific targets, based on ONS data, especially at more senior levels in the organisation, for ethnic minority representation over the next five years. We aspire to be representative of British society today.

This isn’t our only goal as we also strive to meaningfully reflect the wider disabled and LGBTQ+ communities.

Our plan isn’t only about representation. The experience of our employees in the workplace is just as key and we want all our employees to feel included, progress and be supported at work. It’s important to us that all voices are welcomed and heard, and we all have shared responsibility for making this a reality.
One of our four values is, We Are... Inclusive. This value is paramount in supporting our belief that everyone should have the right to benefit from sport and physical activity regardless of age, background or ability.

In terms of an inclusive culture, we know that by being more diverse we’ll make better decisions, be better able to meet the needs of the breadth of audiences we serve and, ultimately, actively reduce the inequalities present in sport and physical activity.

Our inclusive value echoes what our employees have told us:
- we value diverse perspectives and treat everyone with dignity and respect
- we feel able to share our ideas, and we listen to the voices of others
- we respect each other, always mindful of the impact of our thoughts, words and behaviour.

Our Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan encourages our employees and teams to explore our inclusive value and to understand how we’ll further support employees to develop the behaviours that are expected of them. Additionally, we expect regular discussion of all our values and this forms a cornerstone of our Coaching and Valuing Performance Framework.
3.2 Our public pledges

Not only does our long-term strategy have a strong commitment to equality, we’ve made public pledges on how we want to champion equality, diversity, and inclusion throughout our people practices as an employer. These pledges are enshrined through our commitments to:

- the Race at Work Charter
- the Disability Confident Employer Scheme
- the Mindful Employer scheme.

These pledges are more than just plaques on our walls – they provide us with strong frameworks to work within, and the guidance to help us make sustained progress and lasting change.

Additionally, we’re members of, and engage with, a number of overall membership programmes and forums which aid our work in promoting inclusivity and our thinking in areas such as disability and LGBTQ+.

3.3 Our statutory duties

Not only is having equality, diversity and inclusion ambitions the right thing to do, it also complies with our statutory duties under the Equality Act 2010, and our specific Equality Duties as a public body – such as adhering to the annual Gender Pay Gap Information Regulations 2017, in addition to Equal Pay Audits.

As a public body our equality duties mean we must:

- publish our equality objectives
- annually report our progress towards achieving our objectives
- work towards eliminating discrimination, harassment and victimisation
- advance equality of opportunity
- foster good relations between people who share a protected characteristic and people who don’t.

Further details on our statutory obligations can be found in Appendix 5 and these will be built into our annual delivery plans.
3.4 How does the plan work?

Our Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan articulates our widest ambitions and commitments over a four year period.

It'll be accompanied by practical annual plans highlighting specific equality objectives and goals – some of these objectives will be about maintaining our current position, while others will be about where we need to make progress if we identify gaps between where we’re now and where we want to be in the future.

Our plans will be developed by taking an evidence-based approach to understanding our position on an annual basis through analysing the various forms of data we collect, and by seeking intelligence on what we could do differently as we move forward.

Our analysis won't only review staff demographic data but also seek insight into our success in building an inclusive culture. It'll gain the views of the Equality, Diversity and Inclusion Group, our trade union and employee networking groups, as well as reviewing the results of our employee engagement surveys.

This in-depth analysis will also enable us to measure, and therefore celebrate our success and hold ourselves to account, and to take remedial action if the pace of our progress slows.

Our plans will be published both internally and externally and we’ll report on our progress annually. Communication and engagement with our employees is key and each annual plan will be supported by a communications and engagement plan.

This is a focused action plan and work around agile working and wellbeing can be found in the relevant parts of the People Strategy. As part of the Race at Work Charter, zero tolerance of harassment and bullying is included – however, most debate around this sits within our relationship with our trade union, PCS, and Whitley Council meetings.

Other documents that reflect our ongoing commitment to diversity but fall outside of this plan include our family-friendly policies and other matters relating to individual grievances and contracts of employment that have regulatory underpinnings.

3.5 What are the key ambitions for the plan?

These are the equality objectives we’ve identified as priorities over the next four years across the protected characteristics:

1. Leadership creating and sponsoring a climate for change
2. Attracting, progressing and retaining diverse talent
3. Wider change through employee engagement and learning

While we’ve prioritised these themes, we continue to support areas of work being implemented within our wellbeing priorities – another key area of our People Strategy.
Section 4

Our plan
4.1 Leadership – creating and sponsoring a climate for change

Why is leadership important?
Our leadership team has already strongly signalled a public commitment to equality, diversity and inclusion in employment through our external partnerships and our leadership behaviours.

Additionally, the integral role of equality within our strategy, Uniting the Movement, demonstrates the leadership team’s determination to build and foster an organisation that’s truly inclusive of all people and of all backgrounds.

Our team knows that diverse organisations can be more effective, and that building an environment where everyone – from any background – can be their authentic self at work is simply the right thing to do.

Our leaders understand leadership needs to be seen through the lens of inclusion, they make it clear that supporting equality in the workplace is the responsibility of all leaders. Of course, leadership can be found in different parts of the organisation and we all have an immense role in fostering our inclusion efforts.

Our leadership team is committed to addressing the recommendations of Tackling Racism and Racial Inequality in Sport (TRARIIS). Further details on TRARIIS can be found in Appendix 6.

Finally, having diversity in leadership communicates to staff that there’s a pathway to leadership and shows them a concrete example of what it looks like.
How will we support leaders over the next four years?

In our annual delivery plans we’ll highlight specific actions, which will centre on building positive inclusive leadership behaviours for the forthcoming 12 months. Typically, activity will encourage leaders to:

- demonstrate the inclusive leadership behaviours, found in our leadership model
- respect individuals, listen carefully, and builds positive relationships
- actively engage diverse voices
- seek to understand others difference and the causes of conflict
- understand people’s lived experience and build empathy
- keep everyone in the team included and connected, regardless of their work pattern or location
- actively appreciate everyone’s efforts.
- support the implementation of the TRARIIS self-assessment framework, through the leadership team and for all colleagues at Sport England

- Executive Directors will work with their leadership teams on an annual basis to agree directorate goals and actions that promote anti-racism. This will include reviewing progress on the implementation of the TRARIIS Race Equality Framework.
- develop their own inclusion goals and support activities that drive the development of our employees to act as a local catalyst for change
- share progress with their teams and celebrate success
- hold team members to account on all equality, diversity and inclusion matters and on our We are... Inclusive value and through our Coaching and Valuing Performance framework.

Further details of our full leadership model can be found on our staff intranet.
4.2 Attracting, progressing and retaining diverse talent

Why is attracting, progressing and retaining diverse talent important?

We are committed to building a diverse organisation, with an inclusive culture, and authentic, visible leadership at every level.

Our strategy has an ambition to attract new and retain existing talent from the Black, Asian and ethnic minority groups. But this isn’t our only ambition – we want our workforce to reflect all sections of society as we know that this will have positive outcomes for us.

To recap our inclusive value, we strongly believe that as a diverse employer we will better understand our sector and the communities we serve. We believe that:

- our diverse teams will perform better and will be more able to harness innovation and;
- as a diverse organisation, we’re more likely to have an engaged workforce that attracts and retains talent.

Our activity in this area will be multifaceted to support both new recruitment and create an inclusive culture to retain and progress talent.

How will we achieve a more diverse talent pool?

In our annual delivery plans we’ll highlight specific actions for the forthcoming 12 months and these actions will centre upon how we can attract and retain talent, both internally and externally, from under-represented groups.

Positive recruitment practices will continue to be important. These help us to find the right people with the right skills and abilities for the right roles at the right time. Recruitment is a critical activity for us and if we get it right, this will drive diversity within our workforce. Typically, activity will include:

- setting targets or goals on an organisational and directorate level and reviewing these annually
- continuing to support and develop inclusive recruitment practices to remove any barriers from employment and encourage under-represented applicants through positive action
- exploring how we can diversify our candidate pool through apprenticeships, paid internships and other training opportunities
- reviewing what positive action can be considered to progress and develop talent internally.

Ambitious goal

Having an ambitious goal to be more representative of our wider society will increasingly be important for us. Whereas previously we agreed to seek to improve the diversity of our workforce year-on-year, moving forward, through our plan, we wish to set a clearer, internally focused target for measurable change over a more defined period of time – specifically to ensure a continued focus on the issue of under-representation.

Our ambition:

- is realistic but stretching – given our profile, hiring and turnover trends
- has the visible support of leaders and the wider engagement of all colleagues
- is supported by action plans to deliver the targets and it’s regularly monitored.
How will we retain diverse talent?

If we achieve our ambitions to attract more talent from under-represented groups, it’s important that we don’t develop a revolving door of talent. To prevent this, we need to focus upon building an inclusive culture and provide progression and developmental opportunities for under-represented groups. Of course, it’s important that development is obtainable for all our employees as we want everyone to thrive, grow and enjoy their roles and in so doing deliver our strategy, Uniting the Movement.

In our annual plans, we’ll focus upon developing an inclusive culture by:

- building a strong onboarding process
- rolling-out initiatives to root out, challenge and eliminate any inequalities in the employee lifecycle
- continuing to support our employee networking groups who help us to amplify diverse voices cross our organisation
- through our staff engagement surveys and focus groups, continuing to gather data about the culture within our organisation
- continuing to support positive action initiatives to help career development and progression for under-representative groups (such as BITCs Mentoring Circles, our internal Activate Programme and secondments)
- through new mentoring guidance and our appraisal scheme, encouraging all our employees to fully reach their potential.
4.3 Wider change through employee engagement and learning

Why is engagement with our colleagues important?

The engagement of colleagues more widely remains important as achieving our goals around diversity and inclusion needs collective action, ownership, and accountability from across the organisation. This is of paramount importance in encouraging our employees to develop the behaviours championed in our value, We are... Inclusive and driving forward an inclusive culture.

Additionally, ensuring all our employees have opportunities to learn and grow supports our wider goals to have an engaged workforce which thrives and is happy. Engaged employees tend to be more motivated and productive and are likely to be greater advocates for our organisation and our strategy, Uniting the Movement.

How will we achieve greater engagement in our diversity ambitions?

In our annual delivery plans we’ll highlight specific actions for the forthcoming 12 months. These actions will centre upon encouraging our employees to learn more about different topics in this field, use a perspective-taking approach and utilise this learning in their everyday working lives. Typical areas of focus will be:

- initiatives to raise awareness of diverse cultures to support colleagues in their roles to deliver our long-term strategy and to create a community of learning. Current examples include ‘Be an Active Bystander’, raising awareness of the Disability Confidence scheme; Let’s Talk about Race and other areas

- an annual programme of learning and development opportunities (in-person, remote and via our internal learning and communication platforms)

- encouraging staff to talk about our We are... Inclusive value as part of our Coaching and Valuing Performance Framework and the TRARIIS self-assessment framework.

4.4 How we all have a role to play

Our plan takes an ‘ecosystem approach’ – this is crucial and involves us all. It’s important that everyone in the organisation collaborates within our ecosystem and is committed to living our We are... Inclusive value by:

• listening to and welcoming diverse voices
• demonstrating inclusive behaviours and advancing equality and diversity
• championing respect, fairness, and dignity at work
• support learning for everyone enabling them to thrive at work

• valuing relationships with different groups and recognising the intersectionality. Each of us has a myriad of identities that overlap and intersect in dynamic ways to gain a deeper understanding of different perspectives.

We believe that there’s real power in us all working together making progress to effect change. However, some people have specific roles within our ecosystem.

Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan

As a change agenda our diversity and inclusion work through our Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan is always evolving, a continuous process of improvement, not a one-off initiative and can be challenging. We’ve been working intensively to reach our inclusion goals – both in terms of our workforce composition, and to ensure that our employees have opportunities to raise their awareness and understanding of inclusion through formal and informal learning programmes.

The DIAP was launched in July 2021, and the first activities within the plan were delivered towards the end of 2021. It’s too early to say whether we’ve been successful. However we’ll measure our achievements through our employee engagement survey and data collected from other sources including via exit interviews, appraisals, learning evaluations and the recruitment, retention and progression data we capture. Our 2021 engagement results were very positive, and our goal is to maintain these as we face challenges as an organisation, such as government-imposed pay restraint, inflation and high turnover.

Key achievements

1. Inclusive Leadership Programme

The programme delivered to 89% of our senior managers was designed to help our leaders gain a practical understanding of Inclusive Leadership.

Participants were encouraged to discover the connection between creating a more inclusive environment and enhancing team effectiveness.

The programme was rated by 90% of participants as either “meeting” or “more than meeting” their expectations. Reported learnings included:

- “Being more self-aware of my actions to ensure that I am inclusive.”
- “Focus on my relationships and how I can create a dynamic for everyone to flourish”
- “Reflect on my own style and how I need to adjust this to be inclusive.”

We’ll ask if this programme has embedded and led to behaviour change through our employee-engagement survey, and via our appraisal processes. We’re encouraging all our leaders to receive feedback on our value We are... Inclusive.
2. Reciprocal Mentoring Scheme

Launched in September 2021 with 11 pairings, the topics discussed included race, age, disability, gender and pregnancy/maternity. The scheme aimed to enrich and empower both individuals by bridging the gaps between our senior and our more junior employees, accelerating development and increasing awareness of staff experiences both inside and outside of the workplace.

Our scheme evaluations have told us that participants, both mentees and mentors, valued this initiative, with individuals able to focus on their bespoke learning goals. The results showed that 90% would encourage other employees to participate in the future. Reported key learnings included:

- “I grew more confident after participating as I learnt a lot about my own skills as a mentor.”
- “I realised it was ok to voice a different opinion which was not the norm to ensure that any decision includes a cross-section of colleagues.”

We’re looking to expand this programme as the trial evidenced the benefits of mentoring and developing a learning mindset. We believe, as a reverse mentoring programme, that this scheme will also act as a positive action plan to aid career progression.

3. Gender Pay Gap Reporting

Gender pay gap reporting has brought transparency to workplace gender equality issues that need addressing, but it’s the action that follows that makes the real difference. Publishing the data is only one part of the picture – the real value of the exercise lies in the interpretation of the data, the identification of the causes of the gap, and the action taken to address any issues.

We’ve been working hard on the analysis of our data and sharing our findings internally. While we are disappointed to see both the mean and median pay gaps widen for the 2022 snapshot reporting date, we are pleased with the steps we have taken throughout 2022 and already in 2023 to reverse these changes.

We are committed to continuing with our inclusive strategies including flexible working practices, family friendly policies, career path discussions through appraisal, reviewing recruitment and selection data, and analysing our people data.
4. Data and insight

We’ve developed excellent data tools to monitor our progress. We track diversity data through our recruitment and employee life-cycles, and this helps us to inform decision-making in the future. Our diversity data response rates are high. We’ve developed a new interactive data reporting tool, and we are sharing this data with our ED&I group and individual Executive Directors. This will help highlight progress towards our aspirational targets, make comparisons with ONS data and ensure regular discussion at Leadership Team level.

5. Positive Action Programmes

Other achievements include our positive action programmes – being part of the BITC Mentoring Circles programme, our internal Activate Programme and work on our Careers page to improve attraction via storytelling with new videos included about what’s special and unique about working at our organisation.

6. Wider employee engagement and learning

Our learning and development on diversity topics is ongoing, so not a one-off exercise. We provide a mixture of virtual training, lunch and learns and resources. We consider how the training can be made relevant to each individual and their job role and ensure we evaluate the effectiveness of awareness training. A selection of the sessions we’ve delivered and continue to deliver through our rolling programme is provided below.

- Inclusive Leadership Programme for all senior managers 2021 and ongoing
- Racial Inequalities – Let’s Talk About Race for Strategic Leads
- Being Active Bystanders for all staff
- Micro-incivilities & Aggressions for all staff
- Neurodiversity awareness for all staff
- Menopause sessions for line managers and all staff
- Disability Confidence for Line Managers
- Disability sessions for all staff – to Share or Not to Share
- Mental Health Awareness for Line Managers
- Wellbeing for Line Managers
- Throughout the year access to a variety of webinars and resources
- A Dignity at Work Programme commencing in 2023 for all staff, line managers and our Executive Team.

Summary

In the first year of our current plan, we’ve completed many of our goals. Other actions are either ongoing, in progress with key milestones being met, or are being brought forward to the next annual action plan, as are our on-hold actions while waiting for these areas of work to commence.

We’ve engaged across various groups, have increased the transparency of our work across the organisation and have provided raising awareness opportunities at all staff levels.
Appendix 3 – Inclusion and diversity practices at Sport England

Diversity and inclusion are not new to Sport England, and we have a wealth of initiatives already in place to support our staff and our diversity ambitions. These are outlined below.

Recruitment, selection and progression

We recognise the importance of inclusion and diversity in recruiting and retaining the skills and talent we need. Positive recruitment practices continue to be important. These help us to find the right people with the right skills and abilities for the right roles. This will bring further diversity to our workforce.

The action we have taken:

- We’ve improved our careers site and job packs – this includes clear messaging on what diversity and inclusion means to us
- Staff have made some videos for our careers page on what is special about working at Sport England
- We ensure that the wording of job descriptions and adverts is inclusive, free from bias, accessible for candidates outside of sport, and in plain English
- We use name-blind recruitment – a process to remove identifying information, such as gender and ethnicity, to avoid potential bias and encourage employers to consider candidates based on the strength of their skills, knowledge, and experience
- We’ve extended our advertising reach by promoting our opportunities to new audiences on specialist websites
- We’ve included positive action statements in our job adverts as a part of our efforts to reflect a diverse community
- We ensure the application pack includes a diversity data monitoring form that is completed by our candidates and handled in line with data protection regulations, so this is kept separately from the completed application and not shared with the panel
- We use anonymised reports that draw from recruitment data to help us understand the diverse profiles of our candidates and anonymously track who is short-listed, interviewed, and appointed. This provides us with meaningful information to guide our internal discussions and activities.
We encourage all recruiting managers, and anyone on an interview panel, to undertake an interview skills training course, to ensure a high-quality candidate experience.

Our advice to interviewers is to keep the guidance handy and remind themselves of it before they make decisions.

To minimise bias, we use ‘nudges’ in our recruitment documents as a reminder and guide before decisions are made.

We have positive action initiatives in place to support career development, such as mentoring circles through Business in The Community (BITC) and an extension to our Activate programme, supporting career development for our more junior colleagues.

Building senior commitment to inclusion

Our senior leaders set the tone for the behaviour that is expected from our employees. And, with a drive towards increasing diversity within Sport England, attention is also being paid to how inclusive our governance structures are. We work with senior leaders to embed inclusion into the organisation’s way of doing things, highlighting the importance of inclusive leadership.

The action we have taken:

- Actively championed and sponsored inclusion activities
- Developed self-awareness and understanding of bias within relationships, decision making and culture
- Role-modelled inclusive behaviour in people management, and in their own leadership team
- Developed a leadership model with inclusion embedded.

Developing our line manager capability

We recognise that line managers play a key role in inclusion. The relationship they have with staff, and how they go about people management practices and policies, all has an impact on an employee’s opportunities and their day-to-day experiences of work.

Treating all employees with dignity and respect, supporting their learning and development, and ensuring they can have their say in the workplace is important.

Managers need to ensure that there is a level playing field for their team, and support employee’s individual needs.
The action we have taken:

- Examine internal progression and recruitment data to ensure that there is a level playing field and address any hiring bias
- Run a development programme, Leading Inclusively, for our line managers
- Raised awareness of important topics such as race, disability, neurodiversity, LGBTQ+, menopause and wellbeing
- Provided a reciprocal mentoring programme.

Involve all our staff in inclusion

We aim to ensure that all Sport England staff understand and appreciate the role they play in building an inclusive workplace environment. We have clear standards of behaviour for inclusion, treating everyone with dignity and respect, and empowering our staff to challenge exclusive behaviour.

The action we have taken:

- We’ve run ‘Dignity at Work’ programmes for our line managers
- We’ve embedded equality, diversity, and inclusion into our induction programme
- We have eLearning on the topics of bullying and harassment (mandatory completion)
- Supported our Equality, Diversity, Inclusion Group so that it has representation from all directorates and all levels
- We work with our Equality Staff Networks
- We’ve hosted ‘Let’s Talk about Race’ sessions run by specialist providers
- We’ve incorporated our values, including We are... Inclusive, into our appraisal process
- Our staff development plans include diversity training, working with specialists. The training is essential for creating an inclusive ethos and culture, thinking beyond discrimination in its extreme forms to identify and tackle the subtle things that can take place in the organisation daily
- Engaging specialists to run sessions on ‘Be an Active Bystander’ and ‘Tackling Micro Incivilities and Aggressions’ sessions
- As part of our wider engagement programmes, we continue to demonstrate our commitment to encouraging colleagues to be open about mental health and wellbeing.
Evaluate our policies and practices

We’ve created policies to support diversity, inclusion, and equity at Sport England. These need to be implemented by Line Managers and assisted by an inclusive workplace environment.

The action we have taken:
- We offer very generous maternity and shared parental leave pay
- We offer return to work coaching for employees returning from maternity leave or shared parental leave
- We have workplace adjustment guidance in place and provide training to support implementation
- We have developed and will soon be launching a ‘This is Me’ profile which will provide a bespoke tool for making practical workplace adjustments for those who may need extra support, whether that be now or in the future. The aim is to be inclusive and have a positive effect on working life
- We have a flexible working policy
- We provide guidance on trans awareness in the workplace
- We have a diversity and inclusion policy
- We have a dignity at work policy.

Examine organisational culture, climate, and values

The engagement of colleagues more widely remains important, as achieving our goals around diversity needs collective action, ownership, and accountability from across the organisation. All of what we do is developed in consultation with our Equality, Diversity, and Inclusion Group, with representatives from our employee networks and staff union.

The action we have taken:
- Our We are... Inclusive is value embedded in the decisions we take and integrated into our appraisals
- We have clear mechanisms for feedback through our staff engagement and use annual and pulse surveys, examining results by protected groups
- We have a ‘Building a positive workplace climate programme’ for all staff, including our senior leadership team and line managers.
Appendix 4: Staff composition

We are committed to building a diverse organisation, with an inclusive culture and authentic, visible leadership at every level.

We prioritise and collect good quality people data to assess the make-up of our workforce and our Board, assisting us to identify underrepresentation and solutions, so that we can focus our activities appropriately and build a diverse workforce that is reflective of society.

The data is from April 2023. Our data focuses on ethnic group, disability (referred to as disabled/long-term conditions), gender and LGB.

Our Executive Team and Board

Our Executive Team comprises of seven members and our Board comprises of eight members.

As numbers for each are less than ten, we are unable to report the diversity breakdown due to General Data Protection Regulations (Information Commission Code of Practice).

Statutory responsibilities

We have statutory responsibilities – Public Sector Equality Duties, Gender Pay Gap reporting, Equal Pay Audits, Equality Act and guidance from the Civil Service Commission.

Equality Act 2010

We comply with equality law and implement good practice in all aspects of employment including recruitment, pay, working hours, managing staff and developing policies. www.equalityhumanrights.com/en/advice-and-guidance/equality-act-guidance#h1

Public Sector Equality Duties

We’re a public sector organisation and have Public Sector Equality Duty responsibilities and due regard across all of our functions including:

- eliminating discrimination, harassment, victimisation and any other conduct that is prohibited by or under the Equality Act 2010
- advancing equality of opportunity between people who share a relevant protected characteristic and people who don’t share it
- fostering good relations between people who share a relevant protected characteristic and people who don’t share it
- meeting specific Equality Duties through the publication of this Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan and through our Annual Progress Review Report.

Gender Pay Gap Reporting and Equal Pay

We publish details of our approach to reward externally through our Equal Pay Audits and Gender Pay Gap reporting. www.sportengland.org/corporate-information/equality-and-diversity

Our Equal Pay Audits take place regularly and the Gender Pay Gap Report is reported annually, based on a snapshot of 31 March of the preceding year.

Guidance from the Civil Service Commission

It’s a requirement of the Constitutional Reform and Governance Act that selection for recruitment to the Civil Service must be on merit on the basis of fair and open competition https://civilservicecommission.independent.gov.uk/recruitment/
Appendix 6: Tackling Racism and Racial Inequality in Sport (TRARIIS)

Sport England has committed to addressing the recommendations of the Tackling Racism and Racial Inequality in Sport and the Tell Your Story reports, published in June 2021. Sport England, the other home country sports councils and UK Sport have agreed to do this through the five themes for action: Leadership, Workforce, Our People, Investment and Insight.

Over the last two years, we have worked with Sport England colleagues and members of the TRARIIS Stakeholder Group to design our own race equality self-assessment framework. To reinforce our commitment to taking proportionate and appropriate action to be an anti-racist organisation, we have included key actions from our TRARIIS commitment within our Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan.
